One day Chad came home from school and told his mother he'd like to make a valentine for everyone in his class. She thought, "I wish he wouldn't do that!" because she knew Chad didn't have many friends. Nevertheless, she decided she would go along with her son. So she purchased the paper, glue and crayons. For three weeks, night after night, Chad painstakingly made 35 valentines. Valentine's Day came and Chad was beside himself with excitement. He carefully stacked them up, put them in a bag, and bolted out the door. His mother decided to bake his favorite cookies to have that afternoon to help ease the pain. It hurt her to think that he wouldn't get many valentines, maybe none at all. That afternoon she heard the children outside and looked out the window. Chad walked a little faster than usual. She fully expected him to burst into tears as soon as he got inside. When the door opened she choked back tears. "Honey, I have some cookies for you," she said. But he hardly heard her words. He just marched right on by, his face glowing, and all he could say was: "Not a one. Not a single one." His mother's heart sank. Then she noticed the huge smile on his face as he added, "I didn't forget a one, not a single one!"						1
